

COLD WEATHER EFFECTS FIGHTING ALONG LINES NEAR THE COAST TODAY

BOTH GERMANS AND ALLIES CONTINUE HOSTILITIES WITH ONLY ARTILLERY DUELS.

TROOPS GO EASTWARD?

Little Advantage to Either Side Reported in Today's Dispatches From the Fighting Lines in Belgium and France.

Important advantages though not of a decisive nature, are claimed today by the French war office. Germany's new attacks toward the eastern end of the battle line across France with the supposed purpose of isolating the important fortress of Verdun is said in the French official statement to have been thwarted at least temporarily.

In the Argonne region where the main attacks have been in progress for several days, German reinforcements are reported to have been blown up while near Verdun. It is said that the forces of allies have "made progress."

A brief reference in the French statement to the relative position of the opposing forces indicates how the fighting is being pressed. In certain positions the trenches of the Germans and allies are less than 50 yards apart.

Except for the fighting in the Argonne and near Verdun, there is comparatively little activity in Belgium and France. A German official statement says that the allies are showing great activity with artillery along almost the entire front.

There was irreconcilable conflict in the reports from Petrograd and Berlin concerning the fighting in the east. In Berlin it is said officially that great expectations are entertained of a decisive defeat of the Russians. The German military authorities state that their offensive at Lodz has made progress, and that in the region of Plock the enemy is still in flight. Semi-official reports, from Petrograd, however, state that the Germans are being opposed successfully.

Capt. Decker of the U. S. Tennessee reported to the navy department at Washington that no hostile act was intended when the Turks fired on the Tennessee's launch at Smyrna.

London, Nov. 21.—The warning of both battle fronts seemed today to have come to a pause and the interval between the new difficulties for this position, raised by the unexpected severity of the first onslaught of winter.

In west Flanders, where the military operations have been completely suspended, while along the rest of the western line only desultory artillery duels are being fought, giving the impression that a peace exists.

A new crop of stories has arisen that the Germans are sending heavy columns of submarines by rail to Belgium, destined for the coast, while other reports declare that long trains of submarines are being prepared to take German reinforcements to the eastern front.

Eastern Front. Vienna and Berlin agree that nothing decisive has occurred in Poland, but Petrograd claims that the German offensive between the Warta and Vistula has been checked so effectively that the Russians have been able to resume the offensive. It is said that the experts predicted that the Germans would make their stand on the retreat from Warsaw. Recapture of this line probably will mean that the eastern phase of the Polish campaign will proceed on the more or less expected line.

The cold weather is having its effect on the eastern front also. General Von Hindenburg maintained that this will favor the Germans because the Russians will not be able to sit themselves in when the ground is frozen.

Berlin, Nov. 21.—An official communication given out by the general German army headquarters today says:

"On the whole there is no change in the western war theatre. The enemy is showing great activity with his artillery along practically the entire front."

"In the eastern war theatre the operations are still further developed. Nothing can yet be reported re-

STOPPING OF LAUNCH OFFICIALS DECLARE "NOT HOSTILE ACT"

Report From Officer of Cruiser Tennessee Shows Firing Shot to Stop Boat Was Not Hostile.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Captain Benton C. Decker of the cruiser Tennessee has reported that the firing on the ship's launch by Turkish fort at Smyrna, Asia Minor, was not intended as a hostile act.

Secretary Daniels authorized the statement that Captain Decker's first message on Nov. 18 reporting the firing, contained the words "not hostile." No explanation was made of why the information was withheld at the time of the first announcement.

After a conference with President Wilson, Secretary Tumulty today gave out the following statement:

"The public already knows what happened, namely, a boat from the Tennessee tried to enter a harbor with the Turkish government had declared closed. A shot was fired across her bows to stop her. The captain of the Tennessee reported that it was not intended as a hostile act."

HONORED OFFICER WELL KNOWN HERE

Major George Norton Cory, Cousin of Stanley D. Tallman, Commanded in War Dispatches.

Among the officers of Canadian troops mentioned in dispatches by Field Marshal Sir John French, he is the last to be mentioned, for honor in battle, is the name of Major George Norton Cory, of Toronto, Canada. Major Cory is known in Janesville. He has made numerous visits here in the company of Stanley D. Tallman of this city.

Major Cory is a graduate of Bishop's College School, Lennoxville, and of the R. M. C. Kingston. On his graduation he was assigned to the Second Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers, then stationed at Oriella, India. When the South African Boer war threatened, his regiment was ordered to South Africa in 1899 and he served in the last engagement at Dundee. After the retreat to Ladysmith, the regiment was reformed and left that place on the last train out, as did General French, now Field Marshal.

Subsequently Lieutenant Cory was appointed adjutant of a mounted infantry regiment under General Gough, also mentioned in Sir John French's dispatch regarding Cory, and served in this capacity throughout the war.

He was mentioned twice in dispatches, received the D. S. O., an honor coveted in the British army, for skill in handling his troops, and was present with the Queen's medal with seven clasps and the King's medal with two clasps.

Major Cory comes from good fighting stock. His father served with the 10th Highland Regiment in the Boer war. His grandfather was a surgeon in the Prince Edward County Regiment in the rebellion of 1837, while in the war of 1812, upholding the U. E. Loyalists principals, served with a battalion from the same county.

SERVIANS AWAITING AUSTRIAN ADVANCE

Austrian Victories Are Denied—Servians Hold More Advantageous Positions After Retreat.

Paris, Nov. 21.—Telegraphing from Athens the correspondent of the Hays News Agency transmits the following communication issued at the Serbian legation in the Grecian capital:

"Great Austrian victories are denied. The Serbian troops retreated from their positions around Valjevo, which they had evacuated for two months against superior forces. Today they held a more advantageous position and they confidently await the attack of the enemy. The evacuation of Valjevo was not intended as a retreat, but as they could not be lowered, and they were rendered useless."

RUSSIANS PLAN TO RUSH ATTACKS WITH ALL SPEED POSSIBLE

READY TO RUSH TROOPS TO SUP-PORT OF INVADING ARMY.

CZAR'S ARMY VICTORS?

Austrian Army Said to Have Been Forced Back—Germans Holding Their Lines.

Germany's efforts to crush the great armies of Russia have met with a check, according to a statement from Russian sources. Early in the week both Berlin and Petrograd reported that the Russian center was falling back before the German advance over the snow-covered fields of Poland, but it is now asserted that the Russian capital had been checked.

It is intimated in the same quarters that the latest turn in the campaign is likely to have "decisive consequences for the enemy."

The Russian report of the capture of a battery at Lodz, is interpreted as significant suggesting a Russian flanking movement. Large reinforcements, it is said, have been shown at the Russian front. In Petrograd, however, came no suggestion of a reverse. The Germans, it is said there, are making steady progress not only in the center, but in the north, and the Russian army is advancing on the front of east Prussia. Official advice from the west are to the effect that German re-enforcements are still being rushed to the eastern battle-field.

Petrograd, Nov. 21.—The Army Messenger, the official organ of the general staff of the Russian army, summing up recent operations in the east—arena of hostilities, published the following:

"The Germans are making fresh efforts to penetrate our front between Lowicz and Skierwiec with the object of marching on Warsaw."

"It seems that the Russians are through-out important engagements in this direction in the effort of the Germans to march on Warsaw by penetrating our front between Kielce and Radom, resulted in total failure and our troops forced the enemy to retire all along this front. As always in its retreat the German army lost enormous numbers in dead, wounded and prisoners, as well as an official material."

ANXIETY UNABATED AS TO SHIP'S FATE

Steamer Curtis and Lumber Barge Marvin Unheard From Since They Braved Gale on Wednesday.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 21.—Anxiety as to the fate of the steamer Curtis and the lumber barge Marvin, which have not been heard from since they left Baraga, Mich., in the face of a heavy northwestern gale Wednesday morning, was unabated today.

Eight bodies were washed ashore near Grand Marais yesterday told the fate of the lumber lake barge Annie M. Peterson, and gave rise to grave apprehension that the Curtis and Marvin had met the same fate.

All three vessels were owned by the Edward Heinz lumber company, of Chicago, and were en route to New York. The two barges were in tow of the steamer. The Peterson carried a crew of seven, and the finding of eight bodies lead to the belief that both of the other boats had foundered.

In order to determine where such an enormous quantity of woolen goods might be purchased quickly an advertisement was placed in a commercial newspaper saying that the goods were required for prompt delivery, that order would be given immediately, and that payment would be made for goods delivered in New York. The wholesale value of the goods is two million dollars.

PRICE OF MEAT LOWERED WHILE FLOUR IS HIGHER IN SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

Christiania, Nov. 21.—The price of flour has doubled since the beginning of the war and the cutting off of Norway from Russian and Austrian markets. At the same time, meat is cheaper than usual because of curtailment of exports, meats, cattle, hogs and sheep being among the commodities whose export has been sharply restricted by royal decree.

SOUGHT BURIAL PLOT OF PARENTS' BODIES

Henry Kaylor Finds Graves After Fifty Years.—Victims of Drunken Murderer.

Fifty-nine years ago, in Washington county, there occurred one of the most horrid tragedies in the early history of Wisconsin. A liquor-crazed bigamist, fearing exposure of the fact by his wife's parents, that he had another wife living in Germany, cruelly shot both his second wife's parents and blew out his own brains on the scene of the double crime.

The bodies were buried with appropriate ceremonies and the children of the murdered parents, now orphans, were taken up by kindly neighbors.

After fifty-nine years the tragedy was forgotten in Washington county. It was not recalled to the pioneers of that vicinity until this week, when Henry Kaylor of 750 Logan avenue, of this city, went north to attempt to locate the graves of his parents, for he was one of those made orphan in the triple killing.

He remembered that the graves had been dug in the little church yard at Coalville Corners, in the town of Barton, in Washington county. He was nine years of age when the entire tragedy occurred, and he remembered that the burial plot to pay their final tribute to his murdered parents.

Aside from the fact that the bodies were buried there nobody at Coalville Corners remembered the tragedy. He spent several days in inquiry among the aged settlers of that section. Finally one day he chanced upon an aged lady. Through information secured from her, Mr. Kaylor was able to locate the obliterated graves and their resting place of his mother and father.

Some thirty years ago, it seems, when a grave was being dug for the remains of a Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, the sexton dug into the coffin of Mr. Kaylor's parents. Incidents surrounding the manner of burial of the aged Kaylor's parents recalled to the minds of those who remembered at the time the Kaylor murder and the Rinsner suicide of April, 1855.

At present there is only the aged lady who recalled the incident, and it was through her that Mr. Kaylor was able to locate the graves. Mr. Kaylor returned from West Bend yesterday.

The following article regarding the incident appeared in the Janesville Weekly Gazette under the date of April 14, 1855:

"Mr. Reinsner, the suicide and murderer, had difficulty with his wife's parents, caused by his bigamy. He was charged to strike this blow was able to locate the graves. Mr. Kaylor returned from West Bend yesterday."

Sport Snap Shots

Despite their great 1914 showing, the Braves have lost 1041 games in eleven years, which is close to an average of 100 per season. Two other National League teams, Brooklyn and St. Louis, have lost more than 1,000 games in the eleven pennant races. They are closely bunched, as the Cardinals have two more victories than the Dodgers and one less defeat in the period covered. No team in the American League has been defeated 1,000 times in eleven seasons. The St. Louis Browns, who have made the poorest showing in that time, have lost 911 games, which gives them a better average than the Braves and practically as good a showing as the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams of the older league, who rank sixth and seventh in the aggregate figures. No team in the American league has shown enough continuous supremacy to win 600 per cent of the games it has played, the Athletics missing that eleven year average by a single percentage point. The Mackmon team, out many points superior to the other seven teams in their showing since the American league became a major circuit. They are more than thirty points ahead of the White Sox.

"You can say for me that Frank Chance stands forth as the biggest individual failure in the history of the American league," declared Ban Johnson in a recent interview. "Chance had the material in New York, and I think any other man would have made a success of the venture. Ban went on. 'Surely no one could have done any worse. Of all the players that were on the New York roster in 1913 and 1914 and there is a number of likely-looking recruits, Chance failed to develop even one man of class. Why, it was an outrage.'"

"And then when he made up his mind that he was a failure, or at least that he was ready to step down and out he had the unmitigated nerve to ask for pay for services that he had not performed. That surely was gall, to say the least. Why Roger Peckinpaugh, you thought he displayed far more class as manager of the Yankees in the short time he was at the helm than Frank Chance ever did. And Chance was one of the howling successes in the National league."

Of all the players now under contract to the Boston Braves for next season—there are twenty-two of them—there is a single recruit who is not a battery man. Four newcomers are on the list, three catchers and one pitcher, a Cuban named Luque, who twirled with the Louis Branch club. The catchers are Bruggy of the Lowell club in the New England league; Tyler of the Jersey City Internationals; and Trappes of the Birmingham club of the Southern league.

Tommy Murphy's winnings in stakes and purses the last three years has totalled $23,680. This gives his first place among the Grand Circuit drivers. Walter Cox ranked second with $18,814. Pop Geers third with $13,092, and Lon McDonald fourth with $104,178. No other driver has won over $100,000 in the same length of time. Murphy, Cox and Geers have run one, two three in regard to winnings in each of the last three seasons.

Johnny Maubetsch, Michigan's pie eating halfback, is a prominent All-American candidate for two reasons. The first is his great work against Harvard. The second is his ability to escape injuries and stay in the game. Maubey is almost cripple-proof. He required time out only a few times this year and this in spite of the fact that the huskiest men who opposed him never overlooked a chance to maul him up. He always was ready to go in and play his head off for Yost. If Splawn, Hughton and Catlett could have done the same, Michigan probably would have made a great record this year instead of her poorest since Yost took charge at Ann Arbor.

Why are they criticising Freddie Welsh? Don't they teach us to be thrifty? Well then, what's the use of wasting a perfectly good title when one can save it?

Making Gradual Changes to Abandon Use of Direct for Alternating Current.

The Janesville Electric company has given notice to subscribers in this city, to the effect that the company will completely change from the direct to the alternating current system, setting January first, 1916, as the time for cessation of the direct system service. The extent of time, before the change was made, is to allow the subscribers opportunity to make changes necessary to use this current.

At the present time, there are only about sixty users of electricity that have their power supplied by the direct current which compels the use of extra wires in the business district, more poles and separate generators and equipment at the power plant. With the proposed change it will mean that the company will be able to take down a set of distributing wires, eliminating many poles, especially in the business district. Changes have been made gradually for the past years, until at the present time the alternating current is in general use, being more satisfactory and easier to operate than those for the direct current.

The small proportion of the direct current equipment has maintained an additional expense to supply the sixty subscribers who use the old style motors and equipment.

Both the Electric and Wisconsin Telephone companies have complied with the request of the Janesville city commission and have eliminated the extra or useless poles as designated in a report submitted by Fire Chief H. C. Klein several months ago. By gradual work the reduction of the poles in the residential districts has been effected and more will be done this spring. An ordinance to direct the two companies to remove all poles at Milwaukee and Main streets is being considered by the commission and such legislation may be put into effect this winter so as to allow the company sufficient working time to remedy the evil.

D. H. PETERSON BEFORE COURT FOR DRUNKENNESS

D. H. Peterson was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of second offense drunkenness, the complaint being by Chief of Police D. C. Champion. Peterson admitted his guilt and waived his right to an examination. He was not sentenced, however, but committed to the county jail to await his trial, set for November 24th at ten o'clock in the morning. Five hundred dollar bonds were set by the court.

Peterson last night at eleven o'clock walked into the police station in an intoxicated condition for some unknown reason and exhibited his "spree" to Chief Champion. After being given a scolding lecture, Peterson was lodged in jail, to be brought into court this morning.

Property changes hands daily because it has been advertised in the real estate column of Gazette Want Ads.

ST. NICHOLAS—The busiest manufacturing city of Waasland, in North Belgium, eleven miles south of west of Antwerp and nineteen miles northeast of Ghent, on the main line between those cities. The town is the distributing point for the vast and varied productions of Waasland, formerly a barren tract, but now the most fertile and productive district in Belgium. Its Church of St. Nicholas was completed in 1686, and the Church of Notre Dame, built in 1844, contains the first attempt at frescoes in Belgium.

MUNKATCH (Munkacs)—A Hungarian town thirty miles from the Galician border and sixty-eight miles south of east of Kaschau, on the Latorza river, and on the fringe of the East Beskides mountains. The town is noted chiefly because of the famous and strong Munkatch fortress two miles away, situated on a steep rock and now used as a prison. The fort was defended against the Austrians by Helene Zrinyi from 1685 to 1688, and has otherwise figured in Hungarian history. The town manufactures hosiery, salt-petre and alum. Nearby are the mines of iron and a species of rock crystal, locally called Hungarian diamonds. The population is approximately 15,000.

RAGUSA—An Austrian city on the southern coast of Dalmatia, on an arm of land jutting into the Adriatic Sea, beneath the towering Monte Sergio. The town's fortifications rise up from the water's edge, and a huge tower stands guard from a high hill. Beyond are beautiful villas, surrounded by gardens, shrubbery and trees. The march of progress has rendered Ragusa's once useful harbor inadequate for the vessels of today. The city produces oil, silk, leather and liqueurs. In the middle ages Ragusa sought to side-step all disputes with other peoples, frequently resorting to "stancius," a system of arbitration. By its peaceful attitude it became one of the principal mercantile powers of Europe. The overthrow of Hungary in 1686 freed the city, and for two centuries art and literature flourished there. The French seized the town in 1805 and Austria annexed it in 1814. BESZTERECZE-NASZOD—A county of extreme eastern Hungary, in north Transylvania. Its capital is Bistritz, on the Bistritz river, an affluent of the Szamos. The town is fifty miles north-east of Klausenburg. At the close of the middle ages it was a considerable entrepot of commerce. Promenades have replaced its numerous old fortifications. The town's population is about 12,000.

SKUTARI—The principal city of Albania whose history goes back to 168 B. C., when it was the capital of the Illyrian King Gentius. In that year he was captured and taken to Rome. The town is about fifteen miles from the Adriatic Sea coast, and on Lake Skutari, four miles from the Montenegrin border. High mountains hem the town in on all but its lake side, and its mosques and daily decorated stores give it a decidedly oriental appearance. Fire arms and cotton goods are made there, and tobacco, wool, hardware, hides and skins are traded in. The town has a population of about 36,000. Lake Skutari, with its frame of mountain peaks, is regarded as one of the most beautiful lakes in Europe.

WEATHER FORECAST.
Fair tonight and Sunday, not much fresh westerly winds.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Our republic is solid because its people behave of their own free will.
They are not forced into decency.
Think what would happen in the United States if every representative of authority should suddenly die in some great catastrophe, from the president to the last justice of the peace, if every soldier, every official of the army and navy, every policeman, every school, every policeman, everybody with power should disappear, leaving only the people and the Boy Scouts to take care of themselves.

Such a calamity would bewilder us and give us great sorrow, for all our officers are men with their own friendships and their own affections. But it would not shake our government. All our national life would go on as before. One by one each community would get together, proceed to the election of officers, and maybe the Boy Scouts would be called on to count the votes.

This is in a republic. What would it be under a monarch? In France, in the days of the last Napoleon, we were told that "society without force would not exist for a quarter of an hour."

What would happen in the empires of Europe today if all force were removed? No one can tell. People who are governed from the outside become very patient under the force. They when to one to tell them what to do they cannot act together. They become as helpless as a lost flock of sheep without a dog or shepherd.

Scouts, remember that this United States is your country, the people's country. It does not belong to any emperor or king or group of lords.
The nation does not own you; you own the nation. You are not tenants on anybody's ground, liable to be sent away if you fail to please the proprietor. This is the land where all the old enemies of the people have been driven out.

In a democracy the man that does things is the one who has things to do.
We want the man who can run the great factory, who can plan the great bridge, who can build the great ship, who can control the great bank or manage the great school. We want the man who can "carry the message to Garcia," and we won't send the message by anyone else.

David Starr Jordan thus inspires patriotism and love of country in the hearts of the Boy Scouts of America.
The choice sentiment expressed is worth emphasizing, at this thanksgiving period, when half the world is engaged in mortal combat, while peace reigns throughout our domain.

If there was ever a time when the heritage of American citizenship called for profound and heartfelt thanksgiving that time is today, and people who can find no other cause for gratitude, as the national holiday approaches, can well afford to be cheered by the thought that they are sovereigns on American soil.

There is no sacrifice in this kind of appreciation which is broader than church or creed, and appeals to every loyal heart. The accident of birth placed many of us in this fair land, while many enjoy its protection and privileges by right of adoption. But whether by birthright or adoption we are all citizens of God's favored country and at peace with all mankind.

The old bible parable of the talents, applies to us with force, as a people, for much has been given us, and much is required. It is gratifying to know that this obligation is recognized and appreciated, for all over the land, from every nook and corner, willing hands are stretched across the seas, laden with help for suffering humanity in the war-torn world.

As a people we have heretofore practiced spasmodic philanthropy. We are emotional in nature and our hearts respond readily to the touch of sympathy. The earthquake and flood appeal to us for the moment, and if caught at flood tide, we empty our pockets for the relief of suffering, and forget all about it the next day.

But today we are confronted with a different proposition. The war is an object lesson which grows more appalling, as time advances, and there are so many avenues for philanthropic work that sympathy is taxed to the limit, and willing hands, inspired by loving hearts, respond to the demand.

Ships loaded with thousands of tons of food and supplies, sail from every port, while other cargoes are being assembled from all parts of the country. Women's clubs devote time to making bandages, and when it became known that the hospitals were being operated without anesthetics the good people of Rockford raised $3,500 and invested it in chloroform for the use of the Red Cross society.

From the two little girls who gave the only time they had, to the people who are shining their abundance, the spirit of philanthropy is abroad in the land, gripping every heart, and the impulse which prompts it is neither emotional nor spasmodic because the nation realizes that the most we can do is but a drop in the bucket compared to the suffering and sacrifice of our neighbors in the midst of strife.

It is worth noting that no other land under the sun has ever been called upon to make the free-will offering, which America is making today, but it is worth more to know that we possess the spirit and the ability to meet this sacred obligation. We talk about the thrift of Germany and the economy of France, and envy their frugality, forgetting the fact that the wealth of America is more evenly distributed and that old world poverty is unknown.

The people of this land—not the minority, but the great majority—are giving today of their abundance, because they have the abundance, which only America makes it possible to create. Shouldn't we be thankful?

The people have other reasons for gratitude than the fact that we are not involved in war. We are blessed not only with peace, but with prosperity, and the latter has been so long continued that we have been sadly lacking in appreciation, so much so that we had become restless and unreasonable.

We needed the suggestion of hard times, which has annoyed for the past few months, to bring us to our senses, and we ought to thank God on Thanksgiving Day that He has given us the time and inclination to do a little sober thinking.

Too many of us had descended to the level of muckrakers, and it didn't require much of a rake, and only a hint of muck, to keep us busy. The nation has occasion to rejoice that this spirit has given place to a more helpful spirit, and as a result normal conditions will again prevail. We rush to the aid of our suffering brothers, across the sea, and the world applauds. Now let us stand shoulder to shoulder with the brothers at home, and watch results.

Here is a little sermon by John A.
Stuehr in "Leslie's" that sparkles with good suggestions, and if taken to heart, will add to the significance of Thanksgiving day.

"Think! How helpless we are when we do not help each other.

"Demagogues tell labor it is independent of capital and the farmer that he is independent of the banker.
The demagogue says that capital must have labor or it will die, that the world must have the products of the farm or it will starve.

"But what happened to the enormous crop of wheat and to our accumulations of cotton when the European war broke out? We found ourselves without facilities for transportation, and the cotton growers and the wheat raisers were in a dilemma.

"There was plenty of cotton and wheat, but no American ships to take them to market, and if ships had been provided, funds were not at hand by which payments could be made.

"The monetary exchange were clogged, gold was at a high premium, it was necessary to call in the bankers and get them to unravel the tangle and adjust the differences. It was necessary to get the shippers to provide the ships and the bankers the money as well as the farmers the wheat and cotton.

"What an impressive lesson of man's helplessness when he stands alone. What a complete answer to the sophistries of the demagogue—the great trouble-breeder of our day and generation, the one evil spirit that has done more to undermine patriotism and to destroy prosperity than anything else.

"A bitter lesson is being taught to some of the people of the United States—a lesson of costly experience.
May it be well learned."

We ought to be thankful that we are not obliged to stand alone, and no man is, in this land of freedom and great opportunity. The man who finds employment, year after year, ought to be thankful for the capital that works with him, and capital ought to be grateful for the man who contributes loyal support. The bountiful harvest fails to attract attention because it so rarely fails that we have come to expect it, and yet the partnership between the God of nature and the tillers of the soil never showed more satisfactory results than this year.

There is occasion for gratitude, all along the line, and whether our voices can be attuned to song or not, an anthem of melody should fill our hearts with joy and thanksgiving.

Yes, and all along the line of the Nevertheless, Mr. Housewife will have to look for the poultry adver-

determine on the price of her a number of representative markets yesterday found no dealer ready to give any price whatever on the bird

An off year for turkeys was their be awaiting the starting of something by a competitor. Yes, they they could give no figures now for Similar answers were received regarding Thanksgiving prices on ducks and geese.

Observance of the Wisconsin turkey market for the past several days is indicative, however, that the birds will not more than 28 cents per

OUR National Opportunity LESSONS for AMERICA from the WAR

WHY NOT SEE OUR OWN COUN-TRY FIRST?

By Robert H. Benedict.
Every year thousands of Americans have gone abroad to serve as legiti-mate prey for all sorts of commercial hold-up men of various degrees of honesty.

The American tourist has been a good deal of a joke to Europe, and the joke has been doubly relished because of the fact that our entertainers have ridiculed our pockets while laughing at us. The European will concede that some of us are well-behaved and very passable folk, but the prevailing legend seems to put us down as a nation of noisy, ill-bred parvenus. Knowing this estimate of us, we have good-naturedly handed over our money to extortionate landlords and importu-nate guides and beggars, hoping the while to raise ourselves in the estimate of our condescending hosts.

In search of "culture" we have been treated to snubs and sneers, but this has not discouraged us from spending annually enough millions to wipe out the balance of trade in our favor and turn it to the advantage of Europe.

We have spent, roughly, a quarter of a billion dollars each year in doing Europe.

When you stop to think how much good could be done with this vast sum if kept at home, doesn't it open your eyes?

We must not be one-sided, of course.
Travel is broadening, and Europe has many interesting old ruins, with many new ones in process of making. Let us say that if as many Americans visit Europe each year as there are European visitors to America, we will be doing our share.

Our own country offers more interesting sights to the traveler than any other nation in the world. The weary globe-trotter who has never been west of the Alleghenies probably has no conception of what he has missed in never having visited our great west.
One reads of the grandeur of the canons and gorges, of the great mountain peaks and the national parks, but no real conception of them can be formed without seeing them.

California and the west will entertain a million visitors from the east in 1915. Let us hope that this will lead to another patriotic habit—seeing America first.

man's bird, for Janesville market estimates are that they will be able to retail geese as low as 12 1/2 cents a pound and still make legitimate profit. Chickens should sell at about 16 cents a pound.

The big crops in the farming districts have lowered prices on produce staples, and in some cases has brought them tumbling. There is every indication that prices on small staples will be much lower than they were last year except on ducks. For some reason or other there seems to be an almost unparalleled scarcity of ducks. They should retail at from 18 to 20 cents a pound, which while considerably lower than last year is not in accord with the prices quoted on other fowls.

In fruits the drop in prices as compared with last year is decidedly pronounced. Jonathan apples are retailing at from $3.25 to $4 a barrel, these prices being about $1 less than last year. Oranges are $4 a case, which is $1 cheaper than the price a year ago. In a year's time grapefruit has dropped from $5 a case to $3.25.

In the vegetable and green stuff lines some of the comparisons noted are startling. Potatoes, which last year were selling at 75 and 85 cents a bushel, this year are only bringing 50 cents at retail on the Janesville market. Sweet potatoes are about one cent per pound less than they were a year ago, while lettuce is selling at 10 cents a head or 2 1/2 cents less than in 1913. Celery retails at 15 cents a

SUFFERING BELGIUM GRATEFUL FOR GIFT

ARRIVAL OF FIRST SHIP WITH FOOD RECEIVED JOYFULLY.

CASES MOST PITIFUL

Families Have Lost Everything They Possessed—Parents Missing in Many Cases.

Belgium is most grateful for the aid that is coming from the United States. The arrival of the first ship load of provisions was received with joy and the relief from the intense suffering of the past few weeks was alleviated somewhat by the distribution that came from the United States as there is reported as most pitiful. Those who have charge of the relief work desire the public to know that food is not coming from the United States as there is none in the country to be purchased and the fighting nations have not more than enough for their own wants.

Homes have been destroyed, farms laid waste, factories giving employment during times of peace to thousands, lie in ruins. Families have been scattered or are assembled in camps, and the children are the most appalling. Parents missing, children and young girls lost sight of and in many cases the family is left in actual want while the head of the family is a prisoner in a German concentration camp or fighting in the little army under King Albert. The countryside is in ruins. Even the farm cattle have disappeared, driven off for food, or else killed by bullets during the long weeks of fighting. The cities are swarming with the homeless and helpless. They need food and shelter. The food must come from outside the country, the shelter can be provided for but clothing to keep out the chill winds is needed.

The American minister who has the distribution of the supplies under his immediate charge, argues that the people to send liberally as it is needed. Its need will be more acute later when the rigors of the winter become more intense. At present it is cold, raw and snowy. Dispatches tell of genuine freezes along the coast, and the sea coast preventing fighting, and it is to be true that what is happening in the interior where the non-combatants, the women and the children, are suffering.

Tuesday next the fund raised in Janesville and Rock county will be collected and forwarded to the Belgium minister at Washington, who will in turn send it to the relief committee in London, which is purchasing supplies and making arrangements to forward them on a special vessel chartered for this purpose. The lists can still be found at the four banks, at the Gazette office and Baker's drug store. They should be liberally signed before Tuesday so as to make the sum a good-sized one.

FOLLOWED BY JINX MOTORMAN THINKS!

Motorman No. 4 of the local system of the Rockford and Interurban company resides at Rockford. Motorman No. 4 is going back to Rockford to work, he says. Three batches of trouble in as many weeks is enough to discourage anybody and make them quit he thinks.

This morning Mr. No. 4 was coming down Milwaukee street at a fast pace, according to spectators of the accident in which his car crashed into and knocked a Franklin street car, turning east on Milwaukee street, nearly onto the sidewalk in front of the Baker drug store on the Milwaukee street side. Neither car was damaged to any extent. The homecoming Rockford motorman had plenty of clearance after the first bump and came to a halt at River street before bringing car to a standstill. Spectators said that he was unable to do any differently as he was travelling too fast.

He refused to give his name when standing at the corner of Main and Milwaukee streets after leaving his car at River street and crossing the bridge. He said he had enough newspaper notoriety during his brief service here and that in his recent accident with the Heilly bakery wagon the reporter did not give him a fair deal, holding that the accident was the fault of the motorman. Constant urging failed to bring a name from the motorman, but a short while later it was found to be Pierson.

MANY IDEAS ON NEW COMFORT ROOMS ARE HEARD AT MEETING

"Unite Fire Stations With Comfort Rooms," Says W. H. Blair at Builders' Exchange Session.

Numerous suggestions and ideas on the proposed new comfort rooms for the purpose of all and the interests of the regular meeting of the Builders' Exchange, held at the East Side Carle Block, in the rooms of the organization.

Perhaps the most important and practical talk was given by W. H. Blair, on the uniting of the comfort rooms with the fire stations, and the purpose of all and the interests of the regular meeting of the Builders' Exchange, held at the East Side Carle Block, in the rooms of the organization.

"I have been asked to bring before you this evening for your consideration a matter which is now and has been for some time in the minds of many of the people in Janesville. As this exchange was organized for the purpose of all and the interests of the building line, it is fitting that we give our united attention to this proposition, namely a Public Comfort Station, which has been long in the air in this subject during the several years in which it has been agitated in the building journals and other publications. With the thought that Janesville would soon fall into line.

"The same idea came to me which appears to have come to every one who I have heard speak of being in the building line. The location is the triangle which we call the Corn Exchange Square. In fact, that idea got so far a hold on me, that it is only recently that I could get away from it far enough to consider any other location. At my leisure I have put some of my thoughts of it into sketches, which I am bringing before you this evening to bring before you some of the advantages and disadvantages of that location. I am not ready to say that it is not the best location, but am inclined to think that if the proposed plan were brought about, there could be two stations secured and maintained at less cost than one could be if built separately, and it could be placed on each side of the river.

To begin with, to my mind the logical location for the east side fire station is in the middle of the block opposite the Corn Exchange building. The plan could be carried out with less effort and much less liability of collision with other vehicles, than as now in turning onto Milwaukee street from the south side, by River and Court streets, and north by Bull street just as quickly and could get to the top of the hill in half the time and with less than half the risk of the tests. There is a lot in that location which no doubt could be gotten at a right price. It has a frontage which would allow an entrance for the fire department, and a room for a comfort station, and a room for a comfort station. The heat light and men's apartment could be taken care of with the fire department, and the women's apartment could be taken care of with the fire department.

There are suitable rooms on the west side which can be had at a reasonable rental and cared for in the same way as mentioned for the east side, until such time as the city should be able to erect a station near the crown of the hill on the west side.

"Further, as to the east side station, the price for which the present fire station could be sold with what it would cost to erect a separate station at the Corn Exchange, would go far in securing a much more suitable station together with a commodious comfort station and the latter could be maintained at less than 25 per cent of what it would cost if built separately.

"If this before you, it is with no thought of exhausting the subject, nor do I ask you to agree with me on any point, but if I have presented this in such a manner as to cause you to give it a full and free discussion of the matter, I will feel that my time has been well spent, for it is only by the interchange of the thoughts of many that the right conclusion can be reached.

Mr. Vanvoeren gave a short talk on the necessity of two rest rooms in this city, one on either side of the river. F. Lewis of Edgerton, in favor of Mr. Blair's suggestion, while Mr. Cochrane described the rest rooms which he visited while in Oklahoma City, Okla.

It was decided that a full and free discussion of the matter, I will feel that my time has been well spent, for it is only by the interchange of the thoughts of many that the right conclusion can be reached.

MRS. FRANCIS MURPHY DIED AT LONG BEACH

FEATURED DISTRICT SCHOOL AT SOCIAL

Epworth League of Methodist Church Held Mock County School Entertainment Last Evening.

Characterizing the old fashioned district or country school, members of the Epworth League of the Carnegie M. E. church presented a novel and humorous entertainment last evening in the church parson on South Franklin street, at a social which they gave to the members of the church and Sunday school.

Mrs. George A. Jacobs was the teacher of the school and was clad in a peculiar costume that was more fitting in the olden times. It was the last day of school. Charles Collett, who impersonated a small youth, sang a clever selection that brought the house down. All who took part had something to say. Herbert Brownell, Wilmer Davidson and Walter Williams were other young fellows in the school. The girls were all dressed in laughable paraphernalia. The Misses Nellie Atkinson, Dora DeLisle, Beattie and Bernice Billings and Genevieve Jacobs took part. Little Miss Jacobs was plain black "Topsy" with thin black curls.

The social commenced at eight o'clock, each person attending having placed on his or her right hand a paper bag. They were requested to shake hands until they were the bag out. Then came the funny school. There were many games indulged in during the evening, after which punch and wafers were served. The school board, composed of J. L. Hay, president, and the Messrs. Jacobs and Nichols, was comical, each member being given a costume to wear. The younger days in the smaller village. The social was enjoyed intensely by all who attended.

John Dawson.

Funeral services for John Dawson were held this morning at nine o'clock at the St. Patrick's church, Dean Reilly officiating. The funeral was very impressive, and there were many beautiful flowers, tokens of loving friends to the memory of the departed. The procession to the cemetery was exceptionally long. The pallbearers were all nephews of the deceased. They are: John J. John D. Patrick, Walter, Richard and Martin Dawson. Interment was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

CIVIC LEAGUE WILL PROVIDE BANDAGES

Meeting Is Called for Next Monday Afternoon at 1:30 at City Hall, By Order of the President.

Following out the idea for providing bandages for the relief of the suffering soldiers in the belligerent countries, the Janesville Civic League will hold a meeting next Monday afternoon at one-thirty at the city hall, when old linen and cotton bandages will be made. The president of the league earnestly requests all ladies interested to be present, and not to forget their needles, thimbles, thread and scissors. Donations of a cheap quality of outing flannel and unbleached muslin will be most acceptable.

COLONIAL PARTY GIVEN BY PHILOMATHIAN PARTY

Miss Margaret Youngblood of Jefferson avenue entertained the Philomathian class this afternoon. The meeting was purely a social one and was in the form of a Colonial party. An old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner was served at one o'clock with all the unique trimmings of turkey, cranberry sauce, mince pies, etc. The ladies all wore Colonial costumes which proved to be very becoming compared to the modern style of attire. After the dinner a program was given relating to the Puritan times. A tableau of the old-fashioned days were shown, followed by two musical readings, songs and instrumental pieces. The Philomathians enjoy a social afternoon about twice a year which always prove a great success.

CONSTABLE JAMES ROOT AROUSES ITALIAN'S IRE

Constable J. H. Root, of South Beloit, was threatened with a gathering of South Beloit Italians, when he started to evict the family of Joe Palmero from the house they were occupying in the Beloit suburb yesterday morning. A court order was obtained to make the Italians move from the house, because they had not paid the rent for some five months, and Root started to carry out his orders.

Trouble was experienced in gaining ingress into the house and it is reported Root was threatened by Mrs. Palmero and that he took the woman by the hair to defend himself. The husband aroused his Italian neighbors, and for a time a riot was threatened. Another officer aided Root in putting the household goods on the street and affairs assumed a serious nature, the mob threatening the two officers with violence.

Two society workers adjusted the trouble and it was through them the crowd was dispersed.

The big new musical comedy, "One Girl in a Million," which comes direct from the La Salle Opera House, Chicago, after a highly successful run of 150 times, will be presented here at Myers Theatre, Wednesday, Nov. 25 with special matinee. The cast remains intact and is headed by the clever comedian and singer, Felix Adler, who created the role of "High Brow Jimmy." Pretty Eva Fallon and dainty Lenore Novasio, pictured here, are seen in their original parts. The chorus is large and attractive. All of the scenic investiture is maintained.

Amusements

GOOD VAUDEVILLE AT THE MYERS THEATRE

Three Better Than Usual Acts Grace the Boards for This Week End at Myers Theatre.

An excellent bill at the Myers this week is headed by Miss Lillian Doon and company. Miss Doon is a bonny Scotch lassie who mystifies her audience by doing some unusual mathematical stunts and by answering any questions any member of the audience may desire to ask her. Miss Doon successfully answered every question put to her last evening, even to telling where a lost bracelet might be found in a Chicago pawn shop. Loose Brothers are possessed of good voices, their act is entertaining and they take to the audience. Roland Travers and company are illusionists extraordinary. Chickens, pigeons and geese clutter the stage, coming from early from nowhere. A complete disappearance of a chicken is a complete disappearance of a chicken. A complete disappearance of a chicken is a complete disappearance of a chicken. A complete disappearance of a chicken is a complete disappearance of a chicken.

The thirteenth episode of this thrilling serial picture was shown last evening. There are but two installments left, both will be very exciting. The Chicago Herald Movies gave interesting views of late occurrences in and near Chicago.

The music was furnished by the full Myers orchestra.

LYMAN H. HOWE.

Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival which comes to the Myers theatre on December 25 and 26, is enjoyed as much by men and women who have been on the long trails leading to the great scenes in the wide, wide world, as it is by stay-at-homes. Those who have traveled much enjoy Mr. Howe's reproductions because of their absolute fidelity and the reminiscences they awaken. Indeed, the extraordinary merits of this exhibition are now so firmly established that it seems needless to urge anyone to attend. It has advertised itself so well that a crowded house is a foregone conclusion.

The new program has its intense moments such as are imparted by a ride on a runaway train, which in itself is exciting enough, but the thrills are intensified and made more thrilling by means of those realistic "effects" which always distinguish Howe's from all others. Then, also, there are some spectacular moments experienced during a trip down into the crater of Vesuvius—to the very edge of the vast cauldron of boiling lava. Some of the mysteries of nature's handiwork are revealed in a series showing the growth of plants and the development of flowers from bud to blossom. The manifestations of science and chemistry are also shown in a film depicting the electrolysis of metals and the fantastic formations created by the process. Real travel experiences are provided by a trip to ever-changing Venice during which Howe travelers will glide up and down the canals and see the quaint city under the wizardry of superb color effects at sunset and by moonlight. A railroad ride through Greece, bird studies in the colors of nature, and entirely new animated cartoons are some of the other features.

AT THE MYERS.

Announcement is made that the opening performance of the moving picture feature Annette Kellerman in "Neptune's Daughter" will take place at Myers Theatre, Monday, November 23rd. This photoplay met with an enthusiastic reception in New York, and was endorsed by every critic, as an exceptional picture. The story deals with the Land of Make-Believe for two hours and one-half we wander from one beautiful scene to another, while the creatures of this mystic land unfold a tale that might well have come from the pages of Hans Christian Andersen. Annette Kellerman as "Neptune's Daughter" dives, swims, dances and fences and does some remarkable acting. As the principal figure in this romantic drama of land and sea, of the realms of the immortal King Neptune and the mortal King William, Miss Kellerman is ever on the screen.

This wonderful picture will be shown at Myers Theatre for two days, Monday and Tuesday, November 23, and 24 with matinee daily.

REMARKABLE CASE of Mrs. HAM

Declares Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Saved Her Life
and Sanity.

Shamrock, Mo.—"I feel it my duty to tell the public the condition of my health before using your medicine. I had falling, inflammation
and congestion,
female weakness,
pains in both sides,
backaches and bearing down pains, was short of memory,
nervous, impatient,
passed sleepless nights, and had neither strength nor energy. There was always a fear and dread in my mind, I had cold, nervous, weak spells, hot flashes over my body.
I had a place in my right side that was so sore that I could hardly bear the weight of my clothes. I tried medicines and doctors, but they did me little good, and I never expected to get out again.
I got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and I certainly would have been in grave or in an asylum if your medicines had not saved me. But now I can work all day, sleep well at night, eat anything I want, have no hot flashes or weak, nervous spells.
All pains, aches, fears and dreads are gone, my house, children and husband are no longer neglected, as I am almost entirely free of the bad symptoms I had before taking your remedies, and all is pleasure and happiness in my home."

Shamrock, Missouri.

The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

That was the first public accusation against the bland capitalist, and it carried its own prompt warning against repetition. The judge's high sheriff and chief ally retired from office and went abroad only with a bodyguard.
Jesse Purvis had built his store at a crossroads 25 miles from the railroad. Like Hollman, he had won a reputation for open-handed charity, was liked—and hated. His friends were legion. His enemies were so numerous that he apprehended violence not only from the Souths but also from others who nursed grudges in no way related to the line of feud cleavage. The Hollman-Purvis combination had retained enough of its old power to escape the law's retribution and to hold its dictatorship, but the efforts of John South had not been altogether bootless. He had ripped away two masks, and their erstwhile wearers could no longer hold their old semblance of law-abiding philantropists.
Jesse Purvis's home was the show place of the countryside. Commodious verandas looked out over pleasant orchards, and in the same inclosure stood the two frame buildings of his store—for he, too, combined merchandise with baronial powers. But back of the place rose the mountain side, on which Purvis never looked without dread. Twice its impenetrable thickets had spat at him. Twice he had recovered from wounds that would have taken a less charmed life. And in grisly reminder of the terror which clouded the peace of his days stood the eight-foot log stockade at the rear of the place, which the proprietor had built to shield his daily journeys between house and store. But Jesse Purvis was not deluded by his escapes. He knew that he was "marked down."

The years of strain were telling on him. The robust, full-blooded face was showing deep lines; his flesh was growing flaccid; his glance tinged with quick apprehension. He told his intimates that he realized "he'd get him," yet he sought to prolong his term of escape.

Yesterday morning Jesse Purvis had risen early as usual, and after a satisfying breakfast, had gone to his store to arrange for the day's business. One or two of his henchmen, seemingly loafers, but in reality a bodyguard, were lounging within call. A married daughter was chatting with her father while her young baby played among the barrels and cracker boxes.

The daughter went to a rear window and gazed up at the mountain.
The cloudless skies were still in hiding behind a curtain of mist. The woman was idly watching the vanishing fog wreaths, and her father came over to her side. Then the baby cried and she stepped back. Purvis himself remained at the window. It was a thing he did not often do. It left him exposed, but the most cautiously guarded life has its moments of relaxed vigilance. He stood there possibly thirty seconds, then a sharp fusillade of clear reports barked out and was shattered by the hills into a long reverberation. With a hand clasped to his chest, Purvis turned, walked to the middle of the floor, and fell.

The henchmen rushed to the open sash. They leaped out and plunged up the mountain, tempting the assassin's fire, but the assassin was satisfied. The mountain was again as quiet as it had been at dawn. Inside, at the middle of the store, Jesse Purvis shifted his head against his daughter's knee and said, as one stating an expected event:
"Well, they've got me."

An ordinary mountaineer would have been carried home to die in the darkness of a dirty and windowless shack. The long-suffering star of Jesse Purvis ordained otherwise. He might go under or he might once more beat his way back and out of the quick-sands of death. At all events, he would fight for life to the last gasp.

Twenty miles away in the core of the wilderness, removed from a railroad by a score of semi-perpendicular miles, a fanatic had once decided to found a school.
Now a faculty of ten men taught such as cared to come such things as they cared to learn. Higher up the hillside stood a small, but model hospital, with a modern operating table and a case of surgical instruments, which, it was said, the state could not surpass.

To this haven Jesse Purvis, the murder-lord, was borne in a litter carried on the shoulders of his dependents.
Here, as his steadfast guardian star decreed, he found two prominent medical visitors, who hurried him to the operating table. Later he was removed to a white bed, with the June sparkle in his eyes, pleasantly modulated through drawn blinds, and the June rustle and bird chorus in his ears—and his own thoughts: in his brain.

Conscious, but in great pain, Purvis beckoned Jim Asberry and Aaron Hollis, his chiefs of bodyguard, to his bedside and waved the nurse back out of hearing.
"If I don't get well," he said feebly, "there's a job for you two boys. I reckon you know what it is?"
They nodded, and Asberry whispered a name:
"Samson South?"
"Yes," Purvis spoke in a whisper; but the old vindictiveness was not smothered. "You got the old man, I reckon you can manage the cub. If you don't he'll get you both one day."
The two henchmen scowled.
"I'll get him tomorrow," growled As-berry. "That ain't no sort of use in a waithin'."
"No!" For an instant Purvis's voice rose out of its weakness to its old staccato tone of command, a tone which brought obedience. "If I get well I have other plans. Never mind what they are. That's my business.
If I don't die, leave him alone, until I give other orders."
"If I get well and Samson South is killed meanwhile I won't live long either. It would be my life for his.
Keep close to him. The minute you hear of my death—get him." He paused again, then supplemented,
"You two will find something mighty interestin' in my will."

It was afternoon when Purvis reached the hospital, and at nightfall of the same day, there arrived at his store's entrance, on stumbling, hard-ridden mules, several men, followed by two tawny hounds whose long ears flapped over their lean jaws, and whose eyes were listless and tired, but whose black muzzles wrinkled and sniffed with that sensitive instinct which follows the man scent. The ex-sheriff's family were instituting proceedings independent of the chief's orders. The next morning this party plunged into the mountain tangle and beat the cover with the bloodhounds in leash.

The two gentle-faced dogs picked their way between the flowering rhododendrons, the glistening laurels, the feathery pine sprouts and the moss-covered rocks. They went gingerly and alertly on ungainly, cushioned feet. Just as their masters were despairing they came to a place directly over the store, where a branch had been bent back and hitched to clear the outlook and where a boot heel had crushed the moss. There one of them raised his nose high into the air, opened his mouth, and let out a long, deep-chested bay of discovery.

CHAPTER IV.

George Lescott had known hospitality of many brands and degrees. He had been the lionized celebrity in places of fashion. He had been the guest of equally famous brother artists in the cities of two hemispheres, and, since sincere painting had been his pole star, he had gone where his art's wanderlust beckoned. He had followed the lure of transitory beauty to remote sections of the world. The present trip was only one of many like it, which had brought him into touch with varying peoples and distinctive types of life. He told himself that never had he found men at once so crude and so courteous as these hosts who, facing personal perils, had still time and willingness to regard his comfort.

The coming of the kinsmen, who would stay until the present danger passed, had filled the house. The four beds in the cabin proper were full, and some slept on floor mattresses.
Lescott, because a guest and wounded, was given a small room aside. Samson, however, shared his quarters in order to perform any service that an injured man might require. It had been a full and unusual day for the painter, and its incidents crowded in on him in retrospect and drove off the possibility of sleep. Samson, too, seemed wakeful, and in the isolation of the dark room the two men fell into conversation, which almost lasted out the night. Samson went into the con-fessional. This was the first human being he had ever met to whom he could unbend his soul.

The thirst to taste what knowledge lay beyond the hills; the unnamed, wanderlust that had at times brought him a restiveness so poignant as to be agonizing; the undefined attuning of his heart to the beauty of sky and hill; these matters he had hitherto kept locked in guilty silence.

In a cove or lowland pocket, stretching into the mountain side, lay the small and meager farm of the Widow Miller. The Widow Miller was a "South;" that is to say, she fell, by tie of marriage, under the protection of the clan head. She lived alone with her fourteen-year-old son and her sixteen-year-old daughter. The daughter was Sally.

The sun rose on the morning after Lescott arrived, the mists lifted, and the cabin of the Widow Miller stood revealed. A tousel-headed boy made his way to the barn to feed the cattle, and a red patch of color, as bright and tuneful as a Kentucky cardinal, appeared at the door between the morning-glory vines. The red patch of color was Sally.

She made her way, carrying a bucket, to the spring, where she knelt down and gazed at her own image in the water.

Before going home she set down her bucket by the stream, and, with a quick glance toward the house to make sure that she was not observed, climbed through the brush and was lost to view. She followed a path that her own feet had made, and after a steep course upward came upon a bald face of rock, which stood out storm battered where a rift went through the backbone of the ridge. This point of vantage commanded the other valley. Down below, across the treetops, were a roof and a chimney from which a thread of smoke rose in an attenu-ated shaft. That was Spicer South's house and Samson's home. The girl leaned against the garbled bowl of the white oak and waved toward the roof and chimney. She cupped her hands and raised them to her lips like one who means to shout across a great distance, then she whispered so low that only she herself could hear:

"Hello, Samson South!"

She stood for a space looking down, and forgot to laugh, while her eyes grew religiously and softly deep, then, turning, she ran down the slope. She had performed her morning devotions.

That day at the house of Spicer South was an off day. The kinsmen who had stopped for the night stayed on through the morning. Nothing was said of the possibility of trouble. The men talked crops and tossed horseshoes in the yard; but no one went to work in the fields, and all remained within easy call. Only young Tamarack Spicer, a raw-boned nephew, wore a sullen face and made a great show of cleaning his rifle and pistol.

Shortly after dinner he disappeared, and when the afternoon was well advanced Samson, too, with his rifle on his arm, strolled toward the stile.
He sauntered down the road, but when he had passed out of vision, he turned sharply into the woods, and began climbing. His steps carried him to the rift in the ridge where the white oak stood sentinel over the watch tower of rock. As he came over the edge from one side his bare feet making no sound, he saw Sally sitting there, with her hands resting on the moss, and her eyes deeply troubled.

She was gazing fixedly ahead and her lips were trembling. At once Sam-son's face grew black. Some one had been making Sally unhappy. Then he saw beyond her a standing figure, which the tree trunk had hitherto concealed. It was the loose-knitted figure of young Tamarack Spicer.

"In course," Spicer was saying, "we don't 'low Samson shot Jesse Purvis, but them Hollmans 'll spicion him, an'
I heered just now that them dawgs was trackin' straight up byar from the mouth of Misery. They'll git byar against sundown."

Samson leaped violently forward.
With one hand he roughly seized his cousin's shoulder and wheeled him about.

"Shut up!" he commanded. "What d—n fool stuff hev ye been tellin' Sally?"

For an instant the two clansmen stood fronting each other. Samson's face was set and wrathful. Tamarack's was surlily and snarling. "Hain't I got a license ter tell Sally the news?" he demanded.

"Nobody hain't got no license," retorted the younger man in the quiet of cold anger, "ter tell Sally nothin' thet'll fret her."

"She air bound ter know hit all pretty soon. Them dawgs—"

Animals in Color

The true-to-life color studies of the larger African animals in action conintruding hunter.

Here are a few of the color plate subjects:

Charging Rhinoceros
African Buffalo
Leopard Shooting at Close Range

Charging Lion
Near Encounter with a Bull Elephant Duel Between Lion and Native, etc.

The publication of this book is

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By
D. W. WATT

With the Forepaugh show, salaries were paid to the managers and performers every Wednesday, and for four weeks on that day the people for four weeks in advance, so that they might have plenty of time to write to their homes wherever they might be, and have time to get an answer. At the Forepaugh time Billy Burke, the famous clown, came to the wagon after his salary, and after giving it to him, I said, "Billy, here is the new route card for four weeks ahead."

Burke took the card, and looked it over and among the other one day stands on the card it read, "Chicago, on the Lake Front for two weeks." Burke looked at it for a moment and he said, "I wish that card would prohibit this circus from showing in large cities. You know when I walk around the street and see the beautiful things in the windows of the different stores, I cannot keep from buying more or less of them, and by the time we are ready to leave Chicago, I find my roll is well depleted. And then the longer those big lights burn at night, the brighter they get, so that it is hard for me to tell just when to go to bed."

While Burke could see the humorous side of everything, yet in his quiet way when he would come to the ticket wagon, he would usually tell me about things in or around the show that would interest me. I have yet every body around the show was Burke's friend and often at night near the loading place of the show, you could always find Burke surrounded with a lot of friends and telling them a new story he had heard during the day. So that he was not only a big class clown, but always a good entertainer to his friends. When Billy Burke had a story to tell everyone was willing to listen.

Many Janesville people will remember the wonderful lion act given here at the Elk's Carnival several years ago by the Great Bostock animal show, and this act alone was the one great feature and drawing card at the carnival. This was not the only proof of the Bostock trained animals, for at that time they had several of them in different parts of the country with carnival companies, and on vaudeville circuits. But everything in the Bostock company in Europe has taken a great change. Frank Bostock, the head of the concern, died some time ago. One of the sons has been killed in battle, and an agent for the Bostock estate came to America a few weeks ago and has sold to different parties the entire holdings of trained and wild animals that are still held by the company in Europe. Many of these will go to the great park in Brooklyn, N. Y., and a few of the best trained ones were purchased to be used on the road in this country. And this will at least wind up the Bostock company of trained animals for many years to come, and I doubt if it will ever be revived again under the name Bostock.

A few days ago I had a letter from a friend in Chicago, who is engaged in the book business, and in it he said: "You have no idea of the big demand for high class circuses for the fairs. We have already dated several fairs for 1915, and do you know that one of the big hits through the fairs this last year came from Delavan, Wis., and this was known as the Holland & Dockrell troupe of acrobats. Both the Holland and Dockrell's have been famous in the business for years, and the father, Mr.

Dockrell at one time owned a quarter interest in the Barnum show and the mother of the time was one of the features of the Barnum show, with her high class menage horses.

Fred C. Collier of this city, who has been in the show business for seven or eight years, and most of the time with the Bostock show, spent several days here last week visiting his father, and incidentally told me a story of the happenings at Winnipeg, Canada, with the Belle-Floto and Buffalo Bill show, which exhibited in that city two days this summer. The chief of police of the city of Winnipeg stationed many of his big "bobbies" as the policemen are called in that country, all around the outside of the big show.

Just after the evening performance was over of the first day, the storm came up and a sharp clapp of thunder and lightning came very near striking the big top, and frightened the big elephants so that they pulled up the stakes they were chained to and went on a rampage.

The tent from the menagerie into the big tent and putting their trunks under the seats, threw them in every direction. The policemen all rushed inside to see what all the disturbance meant, but when they saw the huge animals throw the seats in every direction, they soon made a hasty retreat, but the elephant man soon got them back into the menagerie again, and soon had them all chained around in a square. Mr. Collier said that one of the big policemen tried to explain why they did not take part in getting the elephants together, and in doing so said: "Of course, you understand we are the law, and we have no right to do that. We never had any experience in handling those kind of beasts, and we do not want to come again, you will have them better managed, for Winnipeg police have no 'ankering' for such work."

Rohde Royal is at present at the Wellington Hotel in Chicago from where he will direct his different troupes of trained horses. He is sending out over the different vaudeville circuits, and on Wednesday Fred Collier got a telegram to report in Chicago immediately, and he will have charge of one of these troupes of high class horses, which will open Monday at the Colonial theatre in Chicago, and expects to be on the road most of the winter.

Mr. Collier has a saddle and bridle which he bought this summer to use in his work for the paid $750, and it is said to be one of the finest in the business. Wherever Rohde Royal's name appears on the theatre bill, it is a headline and always means quality.

The following letter was sent to the Chief of police of a town in South Carolina shortly before the Robinson Famous show was to appear in said town, and was turned over to the Kellogg, business manager of the show, by the chief:

"Dear Sir:—A, writing you to know if you have given away all of your special police badges, and if you have not, would like to know if you can let me wear one next Saturday. I do not want to do anything, just want to go through the show. With a big show like this you can use ten or twelve."

"Thanking you in advance for the above privilege, if you are in a position to grant it, I am

"Yours very truly,
"NEIL THOMPSON."

THOROUGH COOKING KILLS DISEASE GERMS

No Cattle With Hoof and Mouth Disease Being Slaughtered in Federally Inspected Plants.

According to the specialists of the department of agriculture, people even in states quarantined for the foot-and-mouth disease need have no fear of eating meat, provided they cook it thoroughly. The foot-and-mouth disease is not easily communicated to human beings through food, although milk from a diseased cow might transmit the disease to a human being in the case of milk. However, pasteurization will render it entirely safe. Human beings who get the disease commonly get it from direct contact with a sick animal. It is wisest, therefore, for people to keep away from all animals having the disease, unless they are properly provided with rubber gloves, coats and boots, and these are thoroughly disinfected after each visit to the animal.

In the case of meat, as in the case of milk, it must be remembered that all herds which actually show the disease from any animal, are neither milked nor meat from the sick animals can be sold. Sixty per cent of the meat used in this country is produced in the nearly 900 federally inspected slaughterhouses and packing establishments located in 240 cities. In these establishments no animal is slaughtered until it has passed an ante-mortem inspection and also a post-mortem inspection by a veterinarian at time of slaughter. After slaughter its meat cannot leave the establishment until it has been carefully examined and stamped "U. S. Inspected and Passed." In all these establishments no animal showing any symptoms whatever of foot-and-mouth disease is allowed to go to slaughter and no meat which, on post-mortem inspection, shows any suspicious symptoms of this complaint can be shipped out of the establishment. All meat suspected of coming from an animal having this complaint is sent, under government seal, to the tanks to be rendered into fertilizer. The federal inspection stamp on meat, therefore, means that it is entirely safe.

The federal government, however, has no jurisdiction over local slaughter houses which do not ship meat outside of the state in which it is slaughtered. But the federal government has no jurisdiction over such an animal did escape from one of these local slaughter houses, which are purely under state or municipal control, all danger of its communicating the disease to human beings would be removed when it is thoroughly cooked and sterilized. Those who are located near an infected region and wish to be absolutely certain of the safety of their meat, should cook it thoroughly.

The disease when contracted by adults, is not at all a serious illness. It commonly takes the form of slight fever, sore in the mouth and slight eruption on the fingers. In the case of small or sickly children, it may take a more serious form, especially if complicated by other illness.

POLES DRILL TO FREE THEIR NATIVE COUNTRY.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Philadelphia, Nov. 20.—Twice a week, 1,200 Polish Falcons, residents of this city, undergo grueling military drill. Once a month they participate in field maneuvers. Several hundred women folk of Polish descent undergo training no less rigorous, some as nurses for wounded, some as amazons.

These are but a part of the 40,000 men and 4,000 organized Polish women in America, who are awaiting the appropriate moment to strike for the freedom of Poland. Three previous uprisings of the Poles in 1830-48 and 1913 failed to bring independence to Poland as a nation, and that country is now divided between Austria, Russia and Germany.

After the present war is over, the Polish leaders will present a petition signed by 3,000,000 of their folk, demanding their national independence. If it is refused, the leaders say, an armed attempt will be made to gain their rights. For this reason 1,200 Poles are drilling here.

ENLISTING DOGS FOR AID IN LIFE SAVING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Berlin, via London, Nov. 20.—A general appeal is being sent out by the Society for Life Saving Dogs asking for more dogs, more guides and more funds. These animals, called "sanitarians" in German, according to all reports from the front, are of great aid to the medical authorities. The appeal reads as follows:

"Our experiences with these animals since the war began have by far surpassed all expectations. We cannot get enough of these four footed life savers, in the search for wounded soldiers, especially where the victims are hidden in rubbish and in the woods or amid the debris of a fortress, these dogs are of inestimable service. Many a brave fighter is thus saved just in time from bleeding to death or from a death from exposure."

MILTON

Milton, Nov. 21.—Dr. E. S. Bailey, of Chicago, delivered, yesterday, at Milton college, the third and fourth of his series of lectures on little things. In the morning he spoke on Cells, animal, vegetable and bacterial. In an interesting way he showed how these smallest organic units are composed.

In the body a cell is a busy machine for the development of energy. The unit of human energy is in the cell. He showed the fundamental difference between the living cell and the molecules or compounds of elements that lack vital energy. He referred to the blood as "a tissue rather than a fluid," or in the words of Mephistopheles to Faust, "quite a special kind of juice." It takes the destruction of eight thousand cells a second to repair the waste of the human body.

The cortex of the human brain contains six billion cells. We need not fear to use them, because the most of us use so few that at the age of fifty we shall have two or three billions to spare. Many cells are highly intellectual: there are cells in our stomachs that know how to decompose hydrochloric acid, and chemists cannot do that in their laboratories, because they have not found out how.

In speaking of vegetable cells he showed how exactly the same substances enter into both animal and vegetable cells. In the vegetable cell there is the same differentiating vital element. The chemist can decompose starch but cannot make it.

He showed that the chlorophyll of the green plant is practically identical with the pigment cell of the human eye, and are related to all things; a blade of grass or a flower is a member of our family. Of bacteria, which are vegetable organisms, he showed their wonderful energy and rapidity of development, indicating their functions in producing and hindering disease.

The one fact on which Dr. Bailey dwelt was the uniqueness of life in the universe and the greater uniqueness of creative mind.

In the afternoon Dr. Bailey spoke of the gift of the ocean to atomism. He referred to the physiological dignity and the biological importance of water. The microscopic examination of the water of the ocean reveals ever new marvels. Life in the ocean exceeds in amount, life on land, as water itself forms the larger part of the earth's surface. Plant life on land is secondary, being transferred in an age to expand from the ocean to the land. Water is the most useful of all substances. Without it there would be no chemistry—and no chemist. If there is a bridge from inorganic matter to organic, it is through the medium of the water of the ocean. The ocean is the source of our life.

A Surprise Visit. A goodly number of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Curtis gave them a visit Thursday evening to commemorate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. ## HAVE LARGE SUPPLY OF BANDAGES READY Drama Club Members. Almost Filled Box Three Foot Square at Special Session Last Evening.

A large number of the members of the Janesville Drama Society met in special session last evening at seven-thirty and busied themselves for three solid hours making bandages, dressings and arm slings for the wounded sufferers in the belligerent countries of Europe. As the result of their faithful work the club almost filled a box three feet square. There was a good deal of linen handed in, and also absorbent cotton. With the latter dressings for wounds were made. Mrs. W. A. Munn, who spent a good deal of time in pushing the work, deserves credit for getting the large amount of material from the members. Some outsiders interested and anxious to aid the club in their efforts sent in material of various sorts to be thrown into the box.

The men of the club furnished light refreshments during the evening, and when the members departed at the conclusion of their task, they felt that they had succeeded in their efforts.

History Shows German Nation Forced To Defend Existence By Militarism

BY THOMAS C. HALL, D. D.

The allies, we are constantly told, "are fighting for western civilization and democratic progress against German militarism and Caesarism." The phrase has been put into our mouths by an English stump speaker, and the public has accepted it without looking up the facts or really weighing the situation.

Let us try to determine the actual force of this popular phrase. What is German militarism? In its actuality? German militarism is the subject from the conspect of history, we find that general military service was the outcome of the disastrous defeat inflicted by Napoleon upon Prussia, which was then not only crushed, but dismembered and permanently occupied by French troops and drained to the last drop of its resources by their predatory exactions.

After the Russian campaign of 1813 the entire Prussian nation rose in arms against the hated usurper and threw off the intolerable French yoke. It was the same nation in arms that won the battle of Waterloo in conjunction with the English, led by Wellington. Prussia maintained the system of obligatory service to which she owed her regeneration, perfected it and through the victories achieved by it in 1866 and 1870, attained the unification of the German nation. Having conquered Alsace and Lorraine, the provinces stolen by Louis XIV. in a time of profound peace, Germany considered herself content. All she wanted was to keep what she had and to check French schemes of revenge.

As long as Germany found herself confronted with France alone the peace of Europe was not endangered. But at the congress of Berlin, Prince Bismarck, supported by Count Andrassy and Mr. Disraeli, successfully opposed the Russian scheme of expansion in the Balkans.

From that moment Germany found herself facing the deep resentment of her eastern neighbor who began to cultivate intimate relations with France, which culminated in a treaty of alliance with the republic. Russia's perpetual efforts at expansion in Asia and at domination over the Balkan states, with the increasing panslavic agitation in all the Slavic provinces of Austria-Hungary, began to foreshadow the imminent approach of the long dreaded clash with the dual monarchy and its ally, Germany.

Germany was exposed to two fires, to two frontal attacks. On the western frontier the hostile force was strong. On the eastern line it was well nigh overwhelming. It became a matter of vital importance for her to keep up a powerful army at the highest point of efficiency and equipped with the latest technical and scientific implements of defense. The central geographical position of Germany also makes it imperative for her to keep her army always prepared for lightning-like action, for rapidity of movement alone can counterbalance the numerical superiority of her combined enemies.

Does any one even speak of the excessive "navalism" of Great Britain because of her efforts to maintain the two power standard, which means the possession of a navy as strong as the navies of any two powers likely to combine against her? Great Britain relies for her supply of foodstuffs and of the raw materials for her industries exclusively upon the power and efficiency of her fleet, with which she aims to secure the absolute rule of the seas and of all trade routes. The comprehensive measures which Great Britain takes in her determination to dominate the high seas appear to most people perfectly legitimate, whereas similar measures undertaken by Germany with a view of self preservation by means of her army are condemned by the same people as excessive militarism. Is the maintenance of her territorial integrity against a two sided attack not a question of life and death to Germany?

If the numerical standard is applied France deserves the reproach of militarism in a higher degree than Germany, as she keeps a peace establishment of 750,000 men exclusive of officers, 2.1 per cent of her population, as against a German peace strength of 300,000 or 1.2 per cent of the population.

Again, in France everybody, even the most accomplished scholar, must serve in the army three full years under the new law. Many distinguished Frenchmen objected to this lack of discrimination—a discrimination which would have been amply warranted by the greater relative usefulness of the most cultured youth when compared with the unlettered son of the peasant or the artisan. They called attention to the dangers which would result from a three years' internment of this intellectual elite in the stilling atmosphere of small garrison towns and of barracks. They vainly predicted a substantial lowering of the intellectual level of the next generation after the ordeal of three years of military service. Is not such an inevitable deterioration of the best moral and mental resources of a nation a striking indictment of the rigid militarism recently developed in France?

In Germany the infantry are kept under arms for only two years, terms, even the engineers and foot artillery enjoy the advantage of this shorter period of active service. Only the cavalry and horse artillery, less than 10 per cent of the army, have to serve three years. As to the young men of higher education they invariably remain for only one year with the colors.

We thus see that in France 2.1 per cent of the whole population, not excepting the educated classes, are kept in barracks for three years, to the detriment of the entire national efficiency. In Germany, on the other hand, only 1.2 per cent of the population are debarracked from the utilization of their capacity for productivity and the great majority of them only for a term of two years. The more highly educated youths lose only one year, so that they are enabled to start early in the arduous race for success in whatever profession they choose.

As to the heavy expense entailed by military preparations the annual charge per head of the population amounts—in France to $6.75, in Great Britain to $8.50 and in Germany to $4.75.

If neither the duration nor the expense of the military service determines the relative burdensomeness of the principle of "militarism" it is perhaps the social influence and prestige of the military class that tells the full story. Here again we have to deal with the result of a historical development in Germany, where the hereditary nobility plays a more important part than in any other European country. Especially in the eastern Prussian provinces there are a large number of old noble families whose small hereditary estates are absolutely insufficient to provide a livelihood for all of their often numerous progeny. For many generations these gentry served in the Prussian army or in the Prussian civil service. They were the backbone of the armies that achieved victory in 1866 and 1870. These old families, by tradition and by adherence to the dynasty, stand nearer to the throne than the middle classes and naturally enjoy the social prestige attaching to a hereditary nobility. This is also the case in England.

But it would be a grave error to assume that they monopolize the army. The higher middle class in Germany, with its wonderful scientific equipment, has conquered its place in the army as well as in industry and trade. Officers without title of nobility are already in the great majority. To the question why the generals in high commanding positions are always nobles the answer is easy. They have received the distinction of nobility from the emperor in acknowledgment of their services, just as do distinguished scholars also. The reproach aimed at the social prominence of the German officers is nothing but an indictment of the general structure of German society, wherein the nobility, hereditary and appointed, are still holding their positions at the top of the ladder.

But I read somewhere that the stigma of militarism is to be found in the power of one sole irresponsible man—the "war lord"—to make war, to order mobilization and to drag the peace loving, industrious citizen to the appalling slaughter of a modern war without asking their consent. I am afraid, if this definition holds good, that the United States of America would be open to the taunt of being "militaristic." The president of the United States, according to the constitution, wields broader executive powers than any constitutional monarch in Europe. President Wilson ordered a big fleet to Vera Cruz to seize the custom house and occupy the town, while both houses of the congress were discussing for days the wording of a resolution supporting the president's action. Had President Wilson likewise ordered the advance of the American troops from Vera Cruz to the capital of Mexico nothing on earth could have prevented the United States from embarking on a long, costly and arduous military exploit. Under those circumstances there would have been nothing that congress could do except to back the president and to vote the necessary appropriation for the army operations.

In point of fact, diplomatic and military efficiency and unity of action are even the engineers and foot artillery enjoy the advantage of this shorter period of active service. Only the cavalry and horse artillery, less than 10 per cent of the army, have to serve three years. As to the young men of higher education they invariably remain for only one year with the colors.

President Butler in his interesting article, "The United States of Europe," maintains that in a democratic state the military and naval establishments must be completely subservient to the civil power. They should form the police and not the dominant factor of any national life.

Although Germany does not pretend to be a democratic state, yet it is safe to assert, that the civil power, represented by the chancellor of the empire, is supreme and that the military authorities never had to determine the course of German foreign policy. The truth of this assertion does not require proof in the case of Bismarck; but I know of no Caprivi, Bulow and Bethmann-Hollweg, it was the chancellor or foreign secretary who proposed to the emperor and carried out whatever diplomatic moves he found necessary. The general staff in Germany repeatedly sought to precipitate a preventive war against France and Russia, and always was balked by the civil authority and the peace loving Kaiser.

The military intrigues of the officer class in France were abundantly exposed at the time of the Dreyfus trial; but in Germany the military caste is debarracked from all political activity. Even old officers who have gone on the retired list, although legally entitled to take part in the political life, seldom do, under an unwritten law of public opinion. And how about Russia, with her menace to all Europe with an army she confidently boasted was to be 3,000,000 in the course of a few years? Yet Russia disarm and England disarm her navy and Japan rive up army and navy when Germany has been crushed? Does any man really believe this? "German militarism" is only a system of military organization which, by arming the whole nation and attaining the highest type of technical perfection and efficiency, renders Germany thoroughly prepared to resist any attack—and even to anticipate it by a swift onslaught. The adversaries of Germany who contend that they only want to crush German militarism or, still better, "Prussian militarism," and not the German nation, must be reminded that they are vainly pretending, to distinguish between two identical things. German militarism and the German nation in arms, ready to fight for its existence even against tremendous odds, are synonymous notions. Whoever wants to wipe out the one must also crush the other. We are told that Berghard represents the spirit of Germany. He does nothing of the kind. He is an individualist fighting a losing battle against the most finely organized social state yet devised. Nietzsche has far more of a following outside of Germany than in the little land of social reform and social democracy. As well might Mr. Hobson be paraded as revealing the military spirit of North America or Darwin's "struggle for existence" be used to show that England had faith only in pure brute strength.

In point of fact Germany is the most peaceful of the great powers, and the only one that has waged no aggressive war in the forty-four years since 1870. There is in every land, including our own, a noisy minority—clamoring for violence on all occasions. But to any one, who, like myself, has followed the press of the United States, England and Germany, with an occasional dip into the journalism of Paris, it is simply ridiculous to complain that the tone of Germany is military and the others are for peace. The very contrary is the case. There is in all Germany no single sheet that compares in raucous violence with a half a dozen French papers, with two notable London dailies or three or four American newspapers which shall be nameless.

RUSSIAN CHILDREN WILL RECEIVE AMERICAN GIFTS.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) Stockholm, Nov. 21.—Russian children will receive their Christmas gifts from America if American children have done their duty. Nelson Morris, the American minister in Stockholm, has taken up with the Russian authorities the question of admitting the gifts and of facilitating their shipment and distribution. His efforts have met with ready response on the part of the Russians and he gives assurance of arrangements for the prompt handling of the part of the Christmas ship's destined for that country.

MORE EMPLOYMENT FOR MEN SINCE WAR OPENED.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) London, Nov. 21.—Official reports of the government show that unemployment among men is now about one percent, less than it was at the opening of the war. These figures are somewhat surprising in view of the fact that nearly one million men have volunteered their services and are under training in the army. Men who have not entered the army find little trouble now in finding work, notwithstanding the fact that thousands of places vacated by men have been filled by women. The government has hurried forward a contract for the construction of a new Post Office tube, which will give employment to thousands of men for a year or more.

CRACOW, POLAND'S ANCIENT CAPITAL BESIEGED BY RUSSIANS, REPORTED BURNING

Cracow, the ancient capital of Poland, is reported as being invested on the north by the Russians. The photo shows the citadel guarding the city, which overlooks the Vistula river. This ancient fortification equipped with modern war appliances has been unable to stem the tide of the oncoming Russians. The inhabitants of Cracow are reported to be fleeing, while the city itself is in flames. The fall of Cracow would give the Russians the key to the industrial districts in Silesia and strike a vital economic blow at Germany.
